The report also provides a birds eye view of the global industry with details on projected market size and then progresses to evaluate the industry in detail The fast-food industry is an INR 348 billion business, with an estimated contribution of 5% to India's entire food services market. Fast Food restaurants or quick-service restaurants or quick-service restaurants (QSRs) offer cheap but tasty meals that can be eaten on the go, making them popular among working people and especially millennials. So, it doesn't come as a surprise that their offerings complement the new-age needs of society. A lot can also be attributed to aggressive marketing over the years, especially in developing countries like India, where a shift from the core eating practices and preferences is quite apparent. Market Overview and Future Forecast As it stands, the fast-food restaurant market is growing at a CAGR of 20% and above. The Covid-19 pandemic has fuelled this growth by complementing the fast-food chains, making the sector one of the fast-staurant market is growing in the country. However, at the same time, small local restaurants have taken a hit owing to prolonged lockdowns. Despite that, the surge in demand for takeaway food will continue into 2022 as consumers remain uncertain which way the economy will move. As such, we expect the fast-food restaurant market to rise further to INR 827.63 billion by the end of 2025. It's noteworthy that expanding the reach of eCommerce (food delivery) companies like Zomato and Swiggy is helping raise consumer awareness about both the famous fast-food chains and the local brands. Besides, consumers are shifting towards eating out more often than ever before due to rising disposable incomes coupled with the convenience offered by online ordering. According to recent surveys, metropolitans like Delhi, Mumbai, and Bengaluru constitute a high proportion of people who frequently dine out as well as order online. A noteworthy aspect here is that they are willing to spend on quality food, something that drastically changes the QSR landscape and offers hope to locally operating fast-food restaurant chains. To sum up, despite the challenges posed by COVID-19, the fast-food restaurant segment continues to grow rapidly. With the advent of new technologies and the associated social advancements, there's no doubt that consumers will continue to prefer dining out over home deliveries and orders placed via mobile apps while away from their homes. This also helps boost the revenues of these businesses since most customers tend to buy extra items during takeaways. It's, thus, not surprising that the fast-food restaurant market can expect a steady CAGR of 20% for the next five years. Ask for FREE project related details with our consultant/industry expert. FAST FOOD RESTAURANT [CODE NO. 1699] A fast food restaurant (QSR) within the industry, is a specific type of restaurant characterized both by its fast food cuisine and by minimal table service. Food served in fast food restaurants typically caters to a "meat-sweet diet" and is offered from a limited menu; is cooked in bulk in advance and kept hot; is finished and packaged to order; and is usually available ready to take away, though seating may be provided. Fast food restaurants are typically part of a restaurant chain or franchise operation, which provisions standardized ingredients and/or partially prepared foods and supplies to each restaurant through controlled supply channels. The term "fast food" was recognized in a dictionary by Merriam-Webster in 1921. Today, American-founded fast food chains such as McDonald's and KFC are multinational corporations with outlets across the globe. Although, now a days many a fast food restaurants have opened up due to increasing demand among consumers. These have increased exponentially well due to its quick and ready available food products which are likened by most.
